

Greetings!

Hope your first quarter has been buzzing. We wanted to share our thoughts on the recent Andrew Caspersen controversy (see below or visit our blog). As always, check out our Analyst Spotlight to learn more about the valued members of our team. In addition to celebrating our 25th anniversary, we just moved offices! We remodeled a loft space at 345 Seventh Avenue, 10th Floor, New York, New York 10001. Come visit if you are in the area.

Sincerely,

Ken S. Springer - Founder and President

Commentary on Caspersen

The Power of Privilege: Caspersen and Madoff Abused It But Investors are Taking it Back

The unraveling of Andrew Caspersen is alarming not only because of the amount of money Caspersen schemed out of friends, family and investors ($95 million and counting) but also that someone from such a perceived high perch (Ivy league schools; prominent wealthy family) would commit such a crime. The SEC filed civil charges, DOJ filed a criminal case and Caspersen, while silent on the matter to date, spent a few days in a hospital (no word yet on how many days he will spend in jail). Once the smoke clears, the Caspersen debacle will reveal one major shift in the last five years: investors are more empowered than ever before.

Kayla Boorady joined Corporate Resolutions in 2005. She was previously with Sterling Testing Systems (a pre-employment screening provider) and received a Master's degree in Criminal Justice from John Jay College.

As a Vice President, Kayla assists our clients in resolving issues that come up during an investigation - from delicately and professionally interviewing subjects, references and federal and state authorities involved in an action, to schooling many of our analysts on expert research techniques for conducting background investigations. Kayla also shares responsibility for editing investigative reports and making sure our final product has exhausted all investigative capabilities and meets the highest standards for our clients.

In October 2015, Kayla and her husband (an NYPD Detective), had a baby girl, Francesca Grace. Kayla is quite certain Francesca (known around her house as "Frankie") is a baby dinosaur from the noises she makes and the way she can adeptly spit food across the room (as Kayla said "another milestone").
