

A Note From Our Founder

Busy start to the summer!

I hope you've been able to spend some time relaxing with family and friends during what has turned out to be a very busy summer for many of our clients and CRI. At just past the half way point of the year, we have been fortunate to work on a record number of investment deals/allocations and executive hires.

The growth we are experiencing is the result of putting trust at the center of everything we do. And in today's corporate environment, trust is more important than ever. It's troubling to read the growing number of headlines about executives who have abused their positions of power or managed to cover up problematic pasts. A few days ago I read that Goldman Sachs had fired a VP after they learned he was arrested twice for assaulting two different women. It is a real wake up call for many investors and business leaders who haven't already made it a priority to learn everything they can about the backgrounds of people they are doing business with.

On a lighter note, if you haven't done so already, please feel free to visit our new website! We're extremely pleased with how it turned out and we will continue to add content.

We look forward to working together on new and exciting deals in the second half of 2018.

Sincerely,

Ken S. Springer

#MeToo Shakes Up Manager Due Diligence: Here's What to Expect

FUNDfire

A Financial Times Service

Ken S. Springer recently caught up with FundFire's Danielle Walker to discuss due diligence changes that are being made by large pensions to address sexual harassment and other background issues that investors are hoping to avoid at all costs.

"Already, at least two large pensions, the $355 billion California Public Employees' Retirement System (CalPERS) and the $56 billion Los Angeles County Employees Retirement Association (LACERA) have ramped up their efforts surrounding sexual harassment due diligence for asset managers, as reported."

Analyst Spotlight Adrienne Pinto

Adrienne started at CRI in 2013 as an Investigative Analyst. Prior to CRI she was a hospital care investigator. It didn't take long for the CRI team (and our clients) to appreciate Adrienne's innate ability to conduct research and analysis. A graduate of the University of Delaware with honors and distinction, Adrienne is currently an MBA candidate at Baruch College Zicklin School of Business. In addition to managing due diligence background projects for many of CRI's top clients, she is also involved in the firm's compliance and marketing efforts.

As a Senior Investigative Analyst, Adrienne enjoys finding the story. She says, "As researchers we are meant to take different approaches to looking at a whole bunch of information from different databases and sources. As the analyst of this information, I try to put it all together and tell a story about someone's life. Throughout my undergraduate, graduate, and professional career I have looked at connections between how we think and ultimately behave, and as a researcher I am able to look at this information and try to piece it all together."

Adrienne is engaged to an Officer with the NYPD (and former analyst at CRI!). They are getting married later this year.

Did You Know?

Business information collected by Dun & Bradstreet is self-reported. It is not always accurate or complete, meaning it is essentially a corporate LinkedIn profile. This type of information needs to be verified.

A new law, effective September 2018, allows consumers to "freeze" access to their credit report at no extra charge. This allows consumers to protect themselves from credit fraud and identity theft.
